MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 25, 1859.

THE JAPAN MISSION TO THE U. STATES. U. S. STEAMER POWEATAN, Hong Kong, February 15, 1859.

Now is the longest stride about to be taken toward "the opening of Japan." Yesterday the United States steamer Mississippi steamed out of this harbor and pointed her head for the Japanese port of Simoda, and after the arrival of the next mail (say about the 25th) instant) we in the Powhatan will follow her example. The object of this double movement is to put a Japanese Minister and suite in a fair way to reach Washington by the first of June next, and it is expected to be accomplished in this way:

We reach Simoda about the 5th proximo, take on board Mr. Townsend Harris the next day, and steam for seven hours up the Bay of Yeddo until arrived at Kanagawa, anchor (this ship and the Mississippi) and com-mence the ball. About the 20th proximo the Minister and suite, in charge of one of our lieutenants, arrive on board of the Mississsippi, and steam away at once for San Francisco, (probably via the Sandwhich Islands,) thence to Panama, Aspinwall, and New York. The object in proceeding via Phosphate of Iron and Sand San Francisco is a double one-partly to let the Japanese see what a fine country has sprung into existence under our flag during the last ten years, and partly to replenish with coal. I can see now these quiet Japanese thrust suddenly into the streets of San Francisco. It will be a healthy warning of the crowd which will doubtless assemble upon the New York Battery to greet them upon their arrival there. I can see also the surprise that will be awakened in the American public by the polished manners and na-tive good breeding of these simple islanders. Take my word for it, they will be calm and self-possessed in spite of the novelty of the scenes through which they will pass for the first time. The feeling among the higher classes in Japan is now unusually strong towards the United States and Americans, and should they be received with even a moderate amount of good will and attention, it will be hardly possible to measure the amount of good which will result to us after their return.

Nine Princes out of ten in the whole Empire will hasten to Yeddo to see their returned Peers, and to hear them expatiate upon the strange countries and people over which they will have passed, and with whom they will have been thrown into contact. Then, with a still stronger feeling in favor of our countrymen, American energy and enterprise will receive their warm support and encouragement, and American capital will flow into Japan in the shape of steamers, steam engines for shore purposes, light cotton fabries, &c. &c., to the almost certain exclusion of that of less favored nations. I should not myself be surprised if Japan were to become as productive a field for the consumption of steam engines for the crushing of cane, &c. as the Island of Cuba and the State of Louisiana now are. Almost every climate in the world is known in that favored country. and, while the more hardy cereals flourish on the north end of Nipon and Yosso, many tropical productions are found in rank luxuriance upon the more southern islands of Kiusin and Sikof. Among the latter is found the sorghum or Chinese sugar cane in great plenty.

In fact very little sugar is (has heretofore been) imported through the Dutch, it all being raised at home, and for home consumption. Nor do I see how it can ever become an object to import sugar into Japan, simply from the fact that Japanese grocers now there are vast quantities of it used in the just as they are offered to the public for sale. pose that in no other part of the world do confectioners" drive a more active trade.-Every one seems to have "a sweet tooth," and one of their first attentions to strangers is to offer and insist upon your partaking of sweetmeats of some description.

The million at home and abroad wait with impatience on Lord Macaulay's pleasure for two new volumes of his History of England, but if as a peer he writes no faster than he did as a commoner, the million may wait some time. He seems to be flourishing his pen, merely by way of amusement, in furnishing articles for the new Encyclopadio Britannica, the latest of these having been a life of Pitt very compact and very characteristic, which has excited some sensation in This is a very superior Manure, richer in Phos English political circles. It has just been phates than any other Guano imported. Partieu English political circles. It has just been republished in this country by Delisser & Procter, of New York.

A young man who had spent a little, of his own time and a good deal of his fathers money in fitting for the bar, was asked, after his examination, how he got along. "O, well," said he, "I answered one question right." "Ah, indeed!" said the old gentleman with looks of satisfaction at his son's peculiar smart-ness. "And what was that?"

"They asked me what a qui tam action

"That was a hard one! And you answered it correctly did you?" "Yes. I told them I did not know."

I N calling the attention of the public to this val-uable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily dotermined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, therefore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of what SOMBRERO GUANO does contain, we beg to refer to the following list of eminent chemists in different parts of the world, who have analyzed different cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive from the island, without drying or selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be exhibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named: Of phosphoric acid, estimated as equivalent to phosphate of lime, it is found to contain-
